

CRA definition of Case Study: a case study is a single report of the experience and outcome of a Reiki session. This allows the Lay Practitioner an opportunity to practice the theory and practical elements of Reiki, with a willing participant in order to meet the required criteria for application as a CRA Registered Practitioner.

CRA definition of a Lay Practitioner: a Lay Practitioner is a Reiki practitioner who has graduated from Level I, II, III and/or Master Level and has been practicing Reiki for a minimum of one year.

Note: Student member, please be sure to complete the CRA Client information form for each client and keep for your confidential records as required by the CRA Code of Ethics.

Practitioner Applicant Information

Full Name: _____

Phone #: _____ Email: _____

Reiki Session Information

Style of Reiki you are practicing: _____

Length of session: _____ (must be a minimum of one (1) hour in order to count as a Case Study)

How did your case study client respond to the Reiki session?

Comments and observations:

Volunteer Case Study Client Information

Full Name: _____

Date of session: _____ Phone #: _____

Email: _____

Personal Information Release Statement

This completed form will be used by the above named CRA Registered Practitioner Applicant as part of the practicum requirements outlined by the CRA. Disclosure of this information is strictly confidential. Your signature grants permission to release the above information to the Canadian Reiki Association Board of Directors exclusively.

Volunteer Client's Signature _____